DEMCO AUTOMATION INTRODUCES SEMI-AUTOMATIC VIAL FILLING AND LABELING MACHINE

(Quakertown, PA) Demco Automation, manufacturers of automation solutions in small parts assembly, including the revolutionary Wedge™ “Plug and Play” platform, has added a Semi-Automatic Vial Filling and Labeling Machine to their line of off-the-shelf products.

According to Demco Automation President, Tom Garrity, “This assembly platform offers a cost-effective solution (under $100,000) to laboratories in pharmaceutical and life sciences technology companies who need to accurately dispense their products into vials, label the vial, track and store data, and off-load them for shipment.”

The Demco Semi-Automatic Vial Filler and Labeling Machine is built on a small indexing platform with four processing stations: a vial fill station, a capping station, a label apply station and an off-load station. An operator is required to load the empty vials and caps into separate magazines for feeding into the dial.

The fill and labeling process begins with a pick-and-place unit taking an empty vial from the feeding magazine and placing it on the indexing dial. The vial is filled at the next station, and then indexed to the capping station where the cap is positioned on the vial. At the next station a label is applied onto the vial, and the vial is rotated to secure the label. At the final station the vial is off-loaded for operator handling into appropriate containers.

Demco’s main product line, the Demco Wedge, is a programmable, modular assembly automation solution that gives manufacturers greater flexibility to meet market demands in the ever-changing competitive global market. The Demco Wedge software architecture, combined with its flexible mechanical platform, allows for quick and easy line conversion in order to run multiple products on the same line.

Demco Automation has made its mark in cellular automation in the past five years, with product installations in industries including electronics, automotive, telecommunications, pharmaceutical, and medical devices. For more information, call (215) 538-9700.
